Question 36 – 40

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

Temon obtained a first class degree from Universiti Putra Malaysia. He was offered a job in an agricultural department but he turned it down. Temon had ideas of his own. He wanted to start an orange orchard in his village, Kampung Pandan.

His parents were against it but Uncle Rai encouraged him to pursue his dream. Uncle Rai was a retired farmer with a lot of experiences in farming. He promised to assist Temon in any way he could.

As soon as he obtained a bank loan, Temon leased a piece of land in the village. He cleared the land and built a fence around it. Uncle Rai helped to bring in some Indonesian workers to start the orange orchard going. Temon told his uncle of a new breed that he discovered during his course of research at university.

Months passed and the orange seeds grew into young shoots. From young shoots, they matured into young orange plants. They were planted systematically in rows. Soon, round juicy oranges hung in abundance from the branches of the trees. Temon and his uncle looked at the ripe oranges with pride and satisfaction. Their hard work had paid off. Happily, they picked the sweet oranges and collected them in the boxes. The workers then delivered the oranges to various outlets in town. They made a handsome profit from the quick sale of these oranges. Demands kept pouring in.
